GOVERNOR ASKED FOR INFORMATION

UNIVERSITY INQUIRY SHROUDED IN MYSTERY

Undergraduates Declare Unfavorable Publicity Given Recently of Charges of Liquor Violation Is Wholly Incorrect—and An Unfair Impression Has Been Given the Public Regarding the Moral Tone of the University—Boosting Ones Reputation at the Expense of a University Is Anything but Commendable.

A touch of melodrama was injected into the investigation of reported communistic beliefs of certain members of Ohio State university's faculty.

The "props" included a hurrying taxicab containing a special messenger delivering the "papers," a thick screen of mystery around the latest development and the qualified refusal of everyone concerned, who knew about the new angle, to talk for publication.

Investigation by the university trustees, asked for by Governor A. V. Donahey, as a result of the Dabney Horton arrest, is scheduled to be started next week on the campus.

Thursday's developments concerning a letter written three weeks ago by George W. Rightmire, acting president of the university, to the governor giving the views of the trustees on the entire situation.

The missive, according to information at the university was delivered to the executive offices by a special messenger, who hurried downtown in a taxicab.

J. A. Meckstroth, secretary to Governor Donahey, said the letter probably was among the executive papers on his desk. The governor is out of town. Meckstroth declared that he recalled there was a phrase in the letter which asked Donahey to define communism. Other than that, he said there was nothing startling in it.

Several trustees said they had seen the letter, but none had a copy of it. Most of them said that it was "courtious and polite," but they refused to quote from the contents.

Exactly what the letter said and meant constitutes the mystery.

University students took a hand in the issue by making public a resolution, adopted by Boost Ohio, an organization of representative men undergraduates, which deplored the publicity given to the institution by the projected investigation.

The students offered their services to Professor Rightmire in the investigation so that "simple justice may be done."

The Boost Ohio organization expressed the belief that any violation of the prohibition laws was the action of a relatively small minority of the student body. Most of the students, it was said, are "attending strictly to the business of getting an education."

State Senator James R. Hopley, of Bucyrus, author of the "red" resolution of the last legislative session, and to whom the governor referred the university trustees, said that it is unlikely that he will sponsor any attempt for further legislative inquiry when the assembly comes back next week for its one-day session.

Hopley said he was a "regular" Republican and would abide by the sentiment of the majority, which apparently is that no other business save that of financial relief will be considered.

The senator also said the present investigation should be carried to a finish by the governor. Hopley declared he knew nothing about the facts in the case.

A resolution adopted by the student organization says, in part:

"Whereas, much unfavorable publicity has been given recently to charges of widespread violation of the prohibition laws at fraternity social gatherings at the Ohio State university; and

"Whereas, The Boost Ohio committee, representing major undergraduate organization on the campus, from personal knowledge of the situation, is convinced that a wholly incorrect and unfair impression has been given to the public regarding the moral tone prevailing on the campus; now, therefore, be it

"Resolved, that the Boost Ohio committee express its firm belief that any violation of the prohibition laws is by a small minority, and that the actual proportion of lawlessness is much less relatively, than in any community of similar size in the state, and that such conditions are by no means as prevalent as many may have been led to believe."

St. Louis, Mo. (Jan. 7 (UP)).—Mrs. Isabelle Delcarlo of Logan, Ohio, and Charles P. Bevan, Columbus, Ohio, are being held by police here today at the request of the former's mother.

Mrs. Delcarlo said she left home eight weeks ago because her husband wanted to "rule the roost." In Columbus she said she met Bevan, whose wife is suing for a divorce and that the two came on to St. Louis.

Luther Tipsord, 45, owner of the farm, was killed and Irvin and Annie Parrish, Tipsord's employees, were injured.

A piece of the boiler penetrated Tipsord's skull. The boiler was used to generate steam for the operation of a buzzsaw.

Gallipolis — A crushing ice jam in the Ohio river Thursday was threatening the Baltimore & Ohio railroad bridge and a half million dollar's worth of barges, houseboats and other shipping in the mouth of the Great Kanawha river near here.

The gorge extended from Henderson to Lock No. 9, and rivermen feared the jam would give way momentarily.

Columbus — Money, available in abundant quantities will stimulate residential building thruout the state this year, Charles G. King, Massillon president of the Ohio Building Association league, told a meeting of building and loan officials today.

King based his statement, he said, on reports received from almost every section of the state, declaring money was being poured into residential building and that sums for this purpose were readily available.

Columbus — Drastic revision in the regulations covering manufacture of cereal beverages, recently announced at Washington, were explained to Ohio cereal beverage manufacturers by Federal Prohibition Administrator Porterfield today.

Fifty manufacturers, representing all sections of the state, attended a conference which was called by Porterfield to obviate the necessity of issuing individual instructions.

ANNUAL SALE OF GASOLINE TO DECEMBER 31

Was 408,748,104 Gallons— Total Tax Certified Was $8,174,962.08.

Columbus, O., Jan. 8 (UP).— The highest monthly gasoline sales for 1925 were made in August when 61,727,190 gallons were certified for the collection of the two cent tax, making a tax of $1,234,543.80, the state tax commission announced today.

Since April 21, when the law became effective, the total number of gallons of gasoline certified for tax collection was 408,748,104 to December 31.

The total tax certified for that period was $8,174,962.08. Rerunds made on gasoline sold for other than motor vehicles totaled $21,146.75, leaving a net amount of $8,053,815.35 for collection.

FARMS IN OHIO UNDERGOING BIG CHANGES

Some Sections are Increasing Their Acreage While Others are Growing Smaller.

Western Ohio farms are adding to their acreage while eastern Ohio farms are decreasing in size, judging by the 1925 farms census figures for Ohio made public by the federal department of commerce.

The number of farms in Ohio decreased from 256,695 in 1920 to 244,703 in 1925 and the total farm area decreased from 23,515,888 to 22,222,475 acres.

Fourteen counties in the state, contrary to the typical tendency, reported an increase in the number of farms. Thirteen of those fourteen counties are in the eastern half of the state.

"The figures indicate," says Dr. J. I. Falconer, head of the rural economics department at the Ohio State university, "that western Ohio farmers reduced the number of farms but increased the size of the average farm in order to establish a unit more capable of production the chief corn belt products economically."

"In eastern Ohio the counties reporting an increase in the number of farms reduced the size of the average farm presumably to answer the increased demand for special crops, like truck crops, fruits, poultry and dairy products, all of which can be produced economically on comparatively small units."

Tendency seems to be on the decrease in Ohio, Dr. Falconer points out, if the 1925 farm census figures are accurate. In 1920, 29.5 per cent were operated by tenants.

BROTHERHOOD OF LUTHERAN CHURCH MET

Officers for Coming Year Elected and a Splendid Program Was Rendered.

The opening of the New Year in Trinity Evangelical Lutheran Brotherhood was attended by much success as was indicated by the enthusiastic meeting of Thursday evening.

The attendance was excellent and in keeping with the attendance record of the old year.

The usual business procedure was gone thru with before the election of officers for the ensuing year.

The election resulted as follows: President, E. E. Wolf; vice president, E. C. Ebert; treasurer, Clarence Ater; recording secretary, H. H. Groce; reporting secretary, C. M. Titus.

After the election, the outgoing officers served chili-con-carne, wafers, dill pickles and coffee.

As has been the custom for many years the retiring officers also furnished the after dinner program.

President Brehmer gave a most interesting talk on "Henry Ford, The Man and His Work."

Vice President J. R. Noecker, who is always ready to respond, was not able to attend the meeting because of illness in the family. Secretary C. C. Schwarz highly entertained by singing the last popular song hit, "I Want My Rib."

Treasurer John Hulse, talked very interestingly on "Some Strange Customs in France as Seen Thru the Eyes of an American."

Reporting Secretary J. D. Hummel talked on "The Brotherhood of a Half Decade Ago."

The program was rounded out by Rev. G. J. Troutman, the ex-officio member of the executive committee, talking at length on "Some Members That We Do Not Want in Our Brotherhood," first introducing Mr. Grouch, Mr. Doolittle, Mr. Faultfinder, Mr. Dirty and Mr. Knockor, and after commenting on each and of the undesirability of these individuals, he then introduced some characters whose membership should be earnestly solicited during this year, among them being Mr. Cheerful, Mr. Perseverance, Mr. Willing and Mr. Booster. His talk was replete with good advice for the whole membership.

All in all the meeting was a fitting opening for another successful year in old Trinity.

Detroit, Mich. Jan 8 (UP).—Only the approval of state insurance commissioners remained today to validate the merger of the Maccabees and the Ladies of the Maccabees, unanimously approved by a special convention of the Maccabees here yesterday. The ladies of the Maccabees had previously endorsed the proposal. A. W. Frye, supreme commander of the Maccabees, pointed out the proposed merger does not involve the Women's Benefit association with headquarters at Point Huron, Michigan, which formerly was known as the Ladies of the Maccabees. The women's benefit association will continue as an independent organization.

MACK PARRETT

ONE HUNDRED MILLION DOLLARS

Is Uncle Sam's Annual Bill In Jazz Orgy.

A startling estimate of the United States' jazz bill is given in an article by Paul Kinkead in this week's Liberty.

"America, England, Germany, Japan; the whole world, is Jazz Mad," Kinkead writes. "The United States is paying at least $100,000,000 a year for seductive syncopation, to the musicians alone. In New York City approximately 25,000 men and a couple of thousand women are wailing through saxophones or playing musical instruments, in more than 3,000 orchestras, most of them specializing in Jazz.

"The estimates of experts range from $25,000,000 a year to $100,000,000 a year for the New York district, and they estimate that New York spends one-fourth of the American jazz budget. On that basis, the total is $400,000,000 a year for jazz music. Since music itself is a minor part of the expense of the average entertainment, one may figure for himself what America is spending in connection with jazz."

Dorothy was asked to see if the baby was asleep. She cautiously bent over the infant, which opened its eyes and shut them again several times. The GOLDEN RULE in PRACTICE

A series of articles by prominent leaders on the Golden Rule as a guide in International Relations.

A PUZZLE FOR HISTORIANS

By HENRY MORGENTHAU

As I write these lines, I am again on my way to the Near East. My trip has a serious purpose, for besides wishing to see the present conditions in the Near East and to observe the progress made in caring for the refugees, I plan again to visit those splendid orphan schools that are being maintained by the Near East Relief, and have the opportunity once more to sit down with those thousands of children, renewing the joy I have always felt among them.

One must really come face to face with those children, hear them sing their songs, see them practice their daily vocations, listen to their merry though sometimes pathetic voices, and realize their admiration for their American big brothers, to know what this great work actually means.

The philanthropic activities of Americans overseas are one of the great exceptions to America's isolation. I have often thought how future historians who study the American people of this period will be puzzled as to what prompted our general selfishness and isolation. They will observe our unprecedented prosperity, our apparently inexhaustible natural resources, our great mass-production which has brought comfort within every one's reach, and our having been until quite recently the haven of the refugees of all countries.

But it will be inexplicable to those historians, that people so favored, so generously endowed, should turn a deaf ear to the pitiful appeals of others, should practically tell them to depend on themselves and us, the few remaining remnants of their strength to pull themselves out of the distress caused by the war.

One of the few shafts of light that will be observed by these historians in this dark picture are the activities of the Near East Relief.

Golden Rule Sunday will be observed throughout the United States in December, on behalf of the Near East Relief. This series of articles, by prominent public men who are supporters and spokesmen for this great philanthropy, is designed to call public attention to the background and purpose of the work and its need for general support.

The GOLDEN RULE in PRACTICE

A series of articles by prominent leaders on the Golden Rule as a guide in International Relations.

DO AS YOU'D BE DONE BY

By JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, JR.

It is well worth while to set aside each year a Golden Rule Sunday, on which the people of all nations shall direct their thought to the power of love and its expression in brotherhood and service.

The late war sought to demonstrate that force is the greatest thing in the world, that it would right all wrongs, cure all ills, solve problems.

What has been the result? Does peace reign throughout the world? Does good will exist among men and nations? Is there happiness, contentment and prosperity?

On the contrary, there never was more bitterness, selfishness and suffering than today.

Who will not admit that force has failed, that it cannot solve life's problems, that it is not the greatest thing in the world?

What, then, shall take its place, bind up humanity's gaping wounds, insure a real and lasting peace and bring happiness into the world? The answer is, Love.

St. Paul says that love is the greatest thing in the world.

Love is a simple, homely quality. Anyone can practice it anywhere, any time.

It is as applicable in Africa as in America; on weekdays in the struggle of life as on the Sabbath day in the churches.

It is applicable in business, for only as business puts the rendering of service first and the making of profits second will it be most successful, and all of the elements of love are essential in service.

It is applicable in industry, where its absence explains the bitterness and antagonism which often prevail.

I am convinced that love is the greatest thing in the world, the greatest power, the greatest influence.

Golden Rule Sunday will be observed throughout the United States in December, on behalf of the Near East Relief. This series of articles, by prominent supporters and spokesmen for this great philanthropy, is designed to call attention to the background and purpose of the work and its need for general support.

Norma Shearer, in What May Be Called a "Before and After" Pose

WOULD you believe that these photographs are of the same girl? Yes, girls, it's Norma Shearer, movie star, in what might be called a "before and after" beauty pose. At the left she is the unattractive plain stenographer in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "His Secretary," and at the right she is her own charming self.

"Any ordinarily plain woman, not marred of course by too prominent a feature, who studies her own face and figure, can become reasonably attractive," asserts Miss Shearer.

"In the way she dresses, combs her hair, applies make-up, and even to her shoes, she can accent her good points and almost eliminate the things that deter her beauty."

"I was startled by the change that clothes that did not suit my personality, made. Wearing a stiff, tailored grey suit, a panne velvet sailor, and unbecoming glasses, I hardly knew myself when I looked into the mirror. Studying any woman on the street, it is easy to note what a very few changes would improve her appearance. I saved per cent."

BELLING BEE HELD LAST NIGHT

Tuesday Mrs. Edward Schlegler, who resides in Fairview and Mr. Oscar Dennis, also of this city, eloped to Greenup, Kentucky, and were made man and wife. Mr. and Mrs. Dennis arrived home Wednesday and last night their friends gave them an old-fashioned belling-bee at the home of the bride in Fairview. The groom is a widower and has passed his sixtieth milestone, the bride is over 30 years of age. Their many friends will wish them much happiness but are wondering why they eloped across the Ohio river, when they could have saved considerable expense by having the nuptial knot tied in Ohio, as both were over legal age.

Stewed Geese.

A flock of geese on a farmhouse near Vevey recently drank copiously of some cordial. They immediately started a riot. The farmer fearing they were poisoned, plucked their feathers, which he hoped to sell, and then threw the fowl in a barnhouse. The next morning he was surprised to see the geese come sheepishly out of the barn, still a bit wabbling, but otherwise no different from a human being on the morning after.

Tells the Whys and the Wherefores Of the Movies.

Hollywood, Jan. 6.—Out in the Middle West the other day a movie theater owner put in front of his theater a warning. He announced that in his opinion the movie being shown that night wasn't so good. This was such an unusual act that when someone sent word of it to the movie trade press in New York quite an uproar developed. Yet I know a theater man in Hamilton, Ohio, who has been doing practically the same thing for a long time and has succeeded. In my opinion his success is due to the fact that he has won and kept the confidence of his patrons.

The movies have suffered plenty from having "too many critics" but it has suffered much more from not having enough honesty in the advertising used. Good merchants and good advertising men know that you must win and keep the confidence of the public, but the movie folks haven't as a class, learned that lesson yet. Instead of concentrating upon attracting the particular folks who would possibly enjoy the particular type of entertainment offered by a certain movie, the trend has all been to a Barnum-like use of meaningless superlatives which long ago lost all value in the movie world.

Clever theater managers throughout this country could do themselves a great favor if they would concentrate some serious thought on winning the confidence of the clientele they depend upon. If the movie is not so good, it is sure to have some element that will appeal to a certain class and a plain statement of fact, together with the calling of special attention to other features of the show is sure to win friends.

Of course most theater men don't like to pose as "critics." They hate "critics" on general principles. I guess I'm about the only "critic" the theater men ever loved, and that was because I for many years wrote technical criticisms for trade circulation only and pointed out things that were wrong with movies which made it possible for the theater men to use my arguments in buying the criticized movies cheaper.

Importance of Keeping Winter Wheat Crop Pure

The importance of keeping winter wheat pure is emphasized by farm crops men of the Minnesota university. Since mixtures of rye reduce the market value of winter wheat by lowering grades, the planting of wheat on fields that have not produced winter rye for several seasons is the best way to avoid this difficulty.

The university men do not recommend winter wheat as a regular crop in the Red river valley. In the north central part it may be grown successfully if Munturki or some variety equally hardy is planted early in September. Munturki has also proved satisfactory in central and southern sections.

Winter rye is a successful crop in northern Minnesota when a hardy variety is sown the first part of September. Swedish rye, Minnesota No. 2, is recommended for northern and central portions of the state. In the southern part Rosen rye may be grown successfully except on high exposed fields where the snow is likely to be blown off during the winter.

DUPLICATION OF NUMEROUS CITY NAMES

Six Circlevilles, But Only One Coshocton, Gallipolis and Ashtabula.

Most Ohio city names have counterparts in other states. This statement comes in response to alleged arguments put forth by some user of the mails that the state designation should be dropped after names of cities should be dropped after names of cities of outstanding importance as superfluous.

Most letters addressed to Cleveland are no doubt intended for the Ohio metropolis, the fifth city in the United States but there are altogether just 23 Cleveland in the United States to which the mail might be sent were not the name Ohio appended.

The world over, Cincinnati is thought of as being located exclusively in Ohio, but there are villages of the same name in Indiana and Iowa and there is a Cincinnati in New York.

As peculiar a name as Toledo is found in nine states and 19 cities or villages in the United States are called Columbus. Twenty-two states have Dayton and there is one Dayton. Champion of all names found in the directory of Ohio villages and cities is Franklin with 30 counterparts in the Union, besides 11 combinations of the name, five Franklinvilles, three Franklintons and one Franklinton.

Other Ohio cities and villages whose counterparts in names are sprinkled from coast to coast are as follows:

Hamilton, 26 besides three combinations of the name with beach, city and square; Troy, 27, besides combinations with center, grove and mills; Greenville, 23 besides one Greenville and two combinations, Ashland 25; Canton 22; Hillsboro 24; Springfield 25; Oxford, 23 with combinations with depot, junction and Valley; Marion and two Marionvilles; Warren, 23 with six combinations.

Logan, 16; Fremont 13, Sidney 14; besides two sydneys; Marietta 12; Athens 15; Cambridge 14; Mansfield 13; Newark 14; Lancaster 18; Mt. Vernon, 16; Marysville 11 besides three Maryvilles; Bellevue 12; Wilmington 10; Middletown 15 besides eight Middletons and a Middletown Springs; Lebanon, 20 and three combinations.

Even the names like Piqua, Bucyrus, Ottawa, Chillicothe Sandusky, Akron, Zanesville and Xenia are not peculiar to Ohio alone.

There are Xenias in Illinois and Kansas besides the one in Ohio, and there is a Xenia in Kentucky. There are eight Akrons, Indiana has a Zanesville and there is a Sandusky in Michigan, New York and Wisconsin as well as in Ohio, Kansas, Missouri and North Dakota all number a Bucyrus among their postoffices. Mail addressed to Piqua might be thrown off the train in Kansas or Kentucky as well as in Ohio for there are Piquas in both these states. Seven states have Ottawas, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri and Texas can match Ohio's Chillicothe in name.

The following Ohio villages and cities have unique names in the U. S. postal guide in that no other states have postoffices of similar names:

Wapakoneta, Coshocton, New Comerstown, Gallipolis, Galion (altho there are two Gallions), Ashtabula, Upper Sandusky and East Liverpool.

Ohio has the only Lorain, but there are five Loraines, three Loranes and three Lorraines.

Mail addressed to Elyria might go to Kansas or Nebraska, as well as Ohio, while Findlay, Illinois might receive mail intended for the Ohio city. There is a New Philadelphia in Illinois and one in Indiana as well as in Ohio. There are Masillons in Alabama and Iowa in addition to the Ohio city of that name. Steubenville may be found in Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky. Pomeroy mail could go to Ohio, Iowa, Pennsylvania or Washington. Mississippi matches Ohio's Bellefontaine.

Some duplications are; Celina 5, Alliance 8, Defiance 5, Eaton 6, Kenton 8, Youngstown 6, Delaware 7, Urbana 9, Fostoria 6, Niles 6, Nile, 2, Bowling Green 7, Lima 8, Portsmouth 7, and Ironton 8.

There is only one Washington C. H., but there are 28 Washingtons and numerous combinations of the name.

Circleville may be found in Ohio, Kansas, New York, Texas, Utah and West Virginia, while Scircleville can be found only in Indiana.

Fermenting bread dough can be made to yield 75 per cent alcohol, it is claimed through application of a process discovered by an Italian engineer.

FARM NOTES

Soy beans are a satisfactory protein supplement to corn or other grains.

Nature's tonic for growing pigs is pasture and the exercise, sunshine and clean surroundings it affords.

Winter quarters for the breeding flock need not be elaborate unless the lambs are to be dropped early.

Probably no other piece of farm equipment has more fully demonstrated its value than has the silo.

More honey bees are needed in many apple orchards to adequately insure cross-pollination, entomologists have proved.

Wood Used for Type

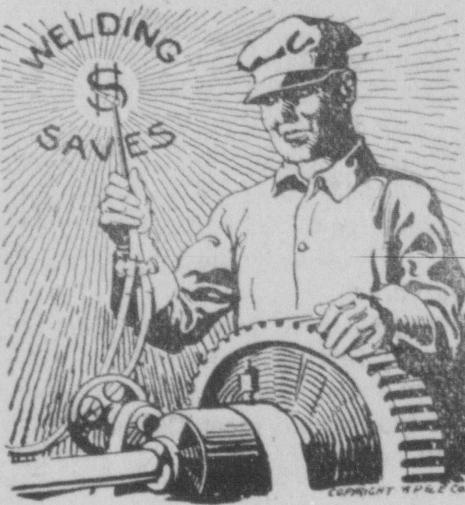

Hard maple is used to a far greater extent than any other species for wood type. Maple is very hard and dense, and stands up well under severe treatment. It also "stays put" after being cut to final form. For electrotypesetting and wood engravings cherry has in the past been very largely used, but due to the scarcity of this wood others are being substituted.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. Will you let me help you select the memorial for your lot. Call at show room. NO AGENTS.

FARMERS BUY
BETTER GRADE
FERTILIZERS

Increase Total Tonnage, But
Concentrate on Analyses
Listed by Colleges.

Ohio farmers are taking to high-grade commercial fertilizers better than ever before, figures compiled by the soils department at the Ohio State university show.

Back in 1922 Ohio farmers bought 122,414 tons of commercial mixed fertilizer, 16 per cent of which represented the fertilizers listed in the Ohio Standard Dozen Fertilizers suggested by the State university specialists as best for Ohio farms.

This past year Ohio farmers bought 164,545 tons of commercial mixed fertilizer. Of this total, 47 per cent represented the Ohio Standard Dozen.

In suggesting a dozen analyses of commercial fertilizer for Ohio, the university soils men aimed to devise a dozen that would meet the needs of virtually every Ohio farm. If fertilizer companies could confine themselves to no more than a dozen analyses, the soils specialists pointed out, it would be possible to reduce the cost of fertilizers appreciably.

There are still more than 100 different analyses on the market, according to Professor Firman E. Bear, head of the soils department at the university, 64 of which last year had a total tonnage of less than 12,000. The mixed fertilizers in the Ohio Standard Dozen this past year included nearly half of all the mixed fertilizers sold in Ohio.

"Analyses not in the Ohio Standard Dozen," says Professor Baer, "were eliminated for one of three reasons; either they were too dilute to be economical to the farmer; they were not feasible from the factory point of view; or there was little or no justifiable demand for them."

CROCKEYJOY
ADVENTURES

By BETTY BROWNE

(Copyright.)

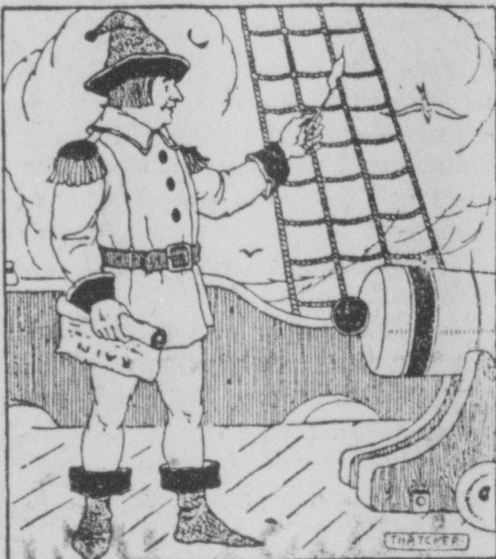

Ruth Meets the Thunderjoy

RUTH'S baby brother was asleep in his crib. Ruth had been left to take care of him while her mother went on an errand. He lay as still and quiet as the toy dog which he had taken to bed with him.

"He does not need watching," thought Ruth. Then her mind wandered. She found herself looking at a splash of sunshine which flooded through the window. In the sunshine tiny bits of dust were dancing.

"I wonder what becomes of all those dust specks," whispered Ruth to herself. At least she thought that she was whispering to herself until from right beside her came an answer.

"I'll show you," said the kindly old Crockeyjoy's voice, for it was he who had heard her. This time the Crockeyjoy carried two immense balls of cord which were wrapped on big reels like Ruth had seen the boys use when they flew kites. On the ends of his cord were two anchors. Before Ruth could even ask the Crockeyjoy how this cord was to be used, she and the Crockeyjoy had shrunk so small that they were no bigger than the dust atoms which she had seen floating in the sunshine. The Crockeyjoy had just finished hooking the anchors in an opening between two floor boards when a slight breeze came rustling through the window. Away they flew like kites on a windy day, only instead of having some one on the ground letting out the cord to them, they unreeled it themselves.

Up and up they went. Higher than the housetops; higher than the church steeple; as high as the clouds themselves they soared.

"It's about to rain," said the Crockeyjoy, "and I want you to watch carefully and see just how the rain is made."

Ruth was very much surprised a moment later when she saw that the clouds were not solid, as she had always imagined. Instead, they were made up of tiny dust pieces like those she had seen floating in the sunlight. Clinging to these dust pieces were shiny globules of water. Right now the cloud she was looking at was soaking wet.

"Look, now! Look—quick!" cried the Crockeyjoy. "There, right in front of you, sails the storm boat with Captain Thunderjoy in command."

"Boom!" went the thunder gun. The storm broke. The lightning flashed. Water streamed from the cloud as though it were a great saturated sponge which some giant hand was squeezing.

Ruth knew she must hurry home or she would get soaking wet, so she reeled in the kite cord as fast as she could. In a few seconds she was back in her home, sitting right where she had been when the Crockeyjoy came to see her.

Raindrops were splashing on her face and her middy blouse was damp. She jumped up and closed the window and, as she did, the screen door slammed and she heard mother coming up the stairs.

"I'm glad I can tell mother about the window being open and rain dashing in. Instead of about my trip to cloudland and getting wet that way," thought Ruth as she ran her fingers through her bobbed hair and brushed several moist ringlets back from her forehead.

Noah Webster Ranks
Among "Best Sellers"

Just three weeks before Daniel Webster delivered his Bunker Hill address another Webster died whose name was as good a household word among his countrymen. No other American of the time had written upon so great a variety of subjects. Two books of widest national fame were his. Each had played an important part in the nation's social history.

One of the volumes was small enough to be slipped handily into a coat pocket. It had gone through one edition after another, until its binding of blue boards was as familiar to Americans as the cover of the household almanac or the lid of the family Bible. This was Noah Webster's "Speech." He published it when he was twenty-five styling it "Part I" of "A Grammatical Institute of the English Language." At its author's death, in 1843, not far from 20,000,000 copies had been circulated. This, be it remembered, was in a country of which the population was 17,000,000. Annual sales of the spellbook rose to near the million mark. Shortly after the beginning of the present century total distribution was estimated at some 75,000,000 copies. This establishes a record for "best seller" American authors.—Mentor Magazine.

AMUSEMENTS

Produced on an elaborate scale with a cast of recognized stars, the Allan Dwan-Paramount production, "Night Life of New York," which opened at the Met theater yesterday is just about the most colorful and entertaining metropolitan story that has yet reached the screen.

Featured in the leading roles of the production, which was adapted by Paul Schofield from an original story by Edgar Selwyn are Red La Rocque, Dorothy Gish, Ernest Torrence and George Hackathorne.

The picture brings Torrence to the screen in the role of an unusually successful westerner who is dead set against New York City because of a series of set-backs he suffered there in affairs of both business and the heart. Rod La Rocque, playing his son Ronald Bentley, just because he has been forbidden ever to go there, is crazy to hit the "big town." He's absolutely useless in business, and after an affair with an actress in town the father begins to think that it might be a good idea after all to let him have a taste of the white lights district and make him so sick of the place that he'll never want to go there again.

So it is that we next find Ronald more or less firmly established in one of Gotham's leading hotels. His first adventure is a flirtation with the pretty telephone operator in his hotel. He takes to her immediately because of the way she sasses him back when he gets fresh over the phone.

But Bentley Sr., had foreseen all possibilities of his son's falling for some chorus girl and has it all fixed with Carrie Feed, the actress Ronald had met back home, to "frame" the boy. There's a nice little check in it for her.

Subsequent events bring it about that young Bentley is involved in a jewel theft. The father thinks it's all part of his little plot against the boy but hot-foots it to town when he's informed differently. Meg (Dorothy Gish) the telephone operator, tells him the whole story after she has gotten a confession out of her younger brother. "He did it in order to get money enough to go west to recover his health," she says. The boy is promised clemency if he will hand over his jewels, but his accomplice comes in and, thinking the other man is trying to double-cross him, he kills him. Ronald is released and the thief arrested.

Young Bentley has had enough of New York and goes back to Clay City—Meg with him, while the father, who is now all taken up with Ronald's actress-friend, Carrie, remains behind to "do the town." As he says himself, "For thirty years I've done New York an injustice. Now I'm going to make up for it."

George Hackathorne has the role of Meg's brother. Arthur Housman is the other crook and Helen Lee Worthington plays Carrie. Riley Hatch also has a prominent role in the supporting cast.

"Night Life of New York" is a story of New York taken entirely "on the spot" and includes actual scenes at the famous El Fey club, the Hotel Commodore, etc.

DORMITORIES DEMONSTRATED AS PRACTICAL

Take Place of Expensive Cell Construction, High Walls are Not Needed.

Columbus, Jan. 7.—The Ohio Institute, "a private body with a public purpose," has taken a hand in the Prison problem of the State in the following manifesto:

Ohio has had about 500 prisoners at the London Farm for more than a year. This experience has demonstrated, that: A considerable portion of prisoners can be handled on the honor system. Expensive cell block construction and high concrete walls are not needed to safely confine a large percentage of prisoners.

Other states faced with the high cost of cell construction and with the evils of having to place two or more men in a cell have been using dormitories, housing from 50 to 100 men, and find the results satisfactory. Cells may cost from $4,000 to $5,000 per inmate. Dormitories have been built that cost from $600 to $1,000 per inmate. Experience in other states indicates that up to seventy-five per cent of a prison population can be safely housed in dormitories.

The overcrowded conditions at all of Ohio's penal institutions require the early expansion of the London Prison Farm. This expansion will involve:

Housing that is safe and economical.

Development of a variety of industries that will provide adequate employment for all prisoners and of such kinds that the training will be of value after release.

The establishment of a classification system so as to use the various penal institutions to the best advantage and provide the kind of treatment needed by the prisoners.

Recently the Ohio Board of Control authorized the Department of Public Welfare to construct two new buildings at the London Prison Farm, to provide housing on the dormitory plan for 600 additional prisoners and space for industries that will furnish employment for such men as are not used on the farm.

An intelligent public opinion can greatly assist public officials responsible for the confinement and treatment of prisoners so that the public may be safeguarded and prisoners who show some real desire to go straight may be trained for usefulness.

The Limit.

A school-teacher in a nearby city had a pupil who had a habit of chewing his lead pencil and piling the pulp on his desk. The teacher, seeing him do it, one day said:

"Joe, that's the limit." When the superintendent visited the school he saw the pile of chewed pulp on Joe's desk and said to him: "What is that?"

"That's the limit," said the boy.

Has Memorized the Bible.

When his eyes began to fail, Rev. W. B. Hogg, the pastor of a western Methodist Episcopal church, started to cultivate his memory by committing to memory the various parts of the Bible, and he has already the New Testament and a large part of the Old. He has submitted to many tests, but he has never failed to demonstrate his perfect familiarity with the New Testament.

In spite of the haphazard management they receive, farm woodlands of the United States produced $394,321,825 worth of forest products in 1919.

Saving sometimes means losing; eggs held only a few days develop watery whites on the way to market, and thereby bring a lower price.

The common brown rat breeds six to ten times a year and produces an average of ten young. The feed rats consume on many farm would more than pay taxes. Ask your county agent about barium carbonate poison. It's inexpensive and effective.

Olive Oil Saves Pain

Olive oil is good for burns and scalds if applied immediately. It should be covered with the white of a raw egg to exclude the air.

LIABILITY INSURANCE

What It Is and the Benefits That Accrue to the Policy Holders.

I wonder if you realize that every car owner is responsible to the public for the operation of his car, whether he drives it himself or allows others to drive it.

PUBLIC LIABILITY is an insurance term indicating the responsibility the car owner is under for injuries or death inflicted on persons thru the operation of his car.

It is most important of all automobile insurance features, owing to the unknown possibilities of the claims.

Some of the factors making accidents and consequent liability claims daily more numerous, and the owner's risk in operating a car an ever increasing one, are:

CONGESTION OF TRAFFIC. Roads are about the same width as formerly, yet traffic thereon has greatly increased. Between fifteen and twenty million motor vehicles are registered in the United States today. This vast number is being increased daily.

LOW PRICES OF SECOND-HAND CARS have added greatly to the number of irresponsible drivers, who menace all other users of the roads. The careful, sane driver is often the sufferer from the faults of others. IMPROVED HIGHWAYS are a constant temptation to speedsters and encourage less careful attention on the part of all drivers.

THE CHILDREN MUST PLAY, and there being very little yard space around the average city home, the playing is done in the path of the motorists. The heavy tolls of 1924 in life, injuries and property losses have been given wide publicity in the press of the country.

AMBULANCE-CHASING LAWYERS (and there is one or more in every city) make a business of creating cases against any car owner involved in an accident, whether or not it is serious, whether or not he is liable and particularly if he has property.

COURT CHARGES AND ATTORNEY'S FEES MUST BE PAID, and eventually, possibly a heavy judgment to be paid with interest and costs. The feelings, sympathies and judgments of juries are generally in favor of the injured and against the car owner. Verdicts for injuries or death run into thousands of dollars, and are larger than ever before. Even if you win, your expenses mount to a large figure.

An automobile liability guarantees the investigation of claims whether you are liable or not, adjusts, pays, fights your case if necessary, pays expenses, lawyer's fees and court costs, relieves you from responsibility and worry. It does all of this for the owner and for any one legally operating the car with the owner's permission.

If you are now carrying liability insurance, the above facts will serve to strengthen the conviction that led you to protect yourself.

This information, coupled with the fact that last year no fewer than twenty-eight states introduced bills for compulsory liability insurance, is conclusive evidence of the advisability of every car owner relieving himself of personal liability.

THE HOMESPUN SENATOR

Hail and hurray for the homespun senator who has arrived at Washington, the Honorable George H. Williams of Missouri! When he was sworn in as a senator of the United States recently he wore a new suit of American homespun cloth, a dark gray suit of which he was intensely proud. Forthwith and promptly he announced he was the homespun senator and hoped for a record in that line.

At various times in the past homespun has been brought to the fore by men in public life. As a rule the wearer of that garb seeks to use the product of his own state, but Senator Williams had to send to North Carolina for the material for his suit. If it had been obtainable in Missouri, as was possible in days that are gone, his homespun adornment would have had a different meaning. As it is, Missouri loses something in the picture. She may have the homespun senator but she did not cover him with her own homespun product. The material in his suit is but an article of commerce. It lacks much of the home flavor.

Indiana once elected a man governor partly because he won the favor of voters by insisting on wearing clothing made from real Indiana material, the original and durable blue jeans, material with which men covered themselves in early days in that state. And he became Blue Jeans Williams, most readers of newspapers of that day having lost the name given him by his parents.

But today, as in other days, the cut or quality of clothing does not make the man, insures nothing more, in most instances, than a bit of personal oddity. The modern homespun garment insures nothing more than certainty of good service from the material, one more personal preference in clothing for the senate, and that body has had a generous and noticeable collection for years.

One may ride into office at times on an oddity of apparel, but reputations are made by service to the country, careful understanding of conditions, clear appreciation of responsibilities, willingness to be of service in the interests of the nation. The mantle of a senator is not the raiment that shields him from sun and storm.—O. S. Journal.

Standards for Beans Have Been IssuedWill Tend to Encourage Better Market Preparation.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Tentative standards for beans have been issued by the United States Department of Agriculture following a series of public hearings in leading bean producing sections of the country. The standards include nineteen different classes of beans and are proposed for adoption and use by state and commercial agencies to demonstrate their practicability under commercial conditions before official standards are established.

The importance of standards for this commodity is emphasized by the department in a statement that the commercial dry edible bean crop of the United States returns to farmers over $50,000,000 a year. Beans are an important staple food, standards for which, the department says, would tend to encourage better farm preparation for market resulting in larger returns to growers, would reduce hazards incident to marketing, and would improve the quality of the finished product.

More than 1,600 samples of beans were analyzed by the department to determine the range and limits of various quality factors in making up the grades. The tentative standards are made up of seven sets of grades for as many classes or groups of classes, the specifications giving weight to local production and marketing problems, as well as to consumer requirements.

Copies of the report of the department's bean marketing investigations together with copies of the tentative standards may be obtained upon request to the bureau of agricultural economics, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington.

EXTRA GOOD SALE

The largest and best sale held in this vicinity for some time was that of Herbert Melvin near Fox, Jan. 5th. Many who were present report the attendance one of the largest they ever saw at a public sale.

The sale started at 11:15 o'clock and with lively bidding was over a little after 2. Property brought extra good prices, amounting to $4,339. W. O. Bumgarner was the auctioneer and Wayne Hoover clerk.

Grow Horse-Radish From Cuttings Set in Spring

Horse-radish requires a very deep, cool, rich soil and late season growth for the best results. It is propagated from cuttings of the small side roots. The cuttings are made from the roots when they are dressed for market in the fall and are stored in the cellar or in pits as other roots are during the winter. These cuttings may then be planted in early spring but since most of the growth is later in the season it is customary to hold them till later and plant with some other crop such as early cabbage or beets. When planted the top of the cuttings should be from three to five inches below the top of the soil. Horse-radish will grow until freezing weather when it should be plowed out, cuttings made for the following year and the desirable roots marketed.

SHORT STORIES OF THE BUCKEYE STATE

OLD WOODS INDUSTRIES

Three primitive industries of Ohio, which brought considerable profit to those engaged in them in the early days, must be by this time practically abandoned. One was the cutting of "hoop-poles." Few of the younger people in the state now know what a hoop-pole is. In the swampy counties of the northwest section of the state the marshy woods were covered with small undergrowth of trees whose trunks were so small that split into halves, each part made a good hoop for binding barrels. Making barrels was a big business in the vicinity and where this work was carried on there was always a good demand for hoop-poles. This gave the section the name of "The Hoop Pole District" which carries some derision. Now the drained lands on which these poles grew are the most productive farm lands in the state.

In the hilly southern part of the state the bark-cutters picked up considerable income by cutting away the bark of the Chestnut oak which they piled by the stream sides, to float down on rafts to the Ohio river towns for use in tanning. This is probably done still, but the "free range" for operation is no longer available. New processes of making leather also dispense in some measure with the use of tanbark.

The third is charcoal burning. Formerly it was believed that heat made by coal or even coke could not be safely used in working iron. At that time there was a steady demand for charcoal for such uses and in the southern and southeastern part of the state where considerable iron production from native ore was carried on, charcoal burning was no small industry. Coke now takes its place in iron-working where coal fires will not do, and very little Ohio wood is put to this use now. The writer remembers seeing charcoal wagons with their peculiar racks driven occasionally on the streets of Columbus not many years back.—J. H. Galbraith in Columbus Dispatch.

A half century since Circleville was a market for hoop-poles and tan bark as we had a tannery and several cooper shops.

FIGHTING FOR BIG STAKES

Chicago, Jan. 6.—(UP).—William D. Shepherd's fight for possession of Billy McClintock's $1,000,000 estate, opened in circuit court today.

Marie Gartner and Eva Nelson, maids in the Shepherd home, testified that they witnessed the will which Billy signed and which Shepherd is now seeking to have accepted by the court. This will, which Shepherd admits drawing up, leaves all of the McClintock fortune to Mr. and Mrs. Shepherd, except for an annuity of $8,000 for Isabelle Pope—the girl Billy would have married had not death prevented the marriage.

Opposed to Shepherd in the will contest are eight of Billy's cousins who argue that Shepherd used "undue influence" in having Billy sign the will and that it is therefore invalid. They are supported in their contention by Miss Pope, who has been promised half of the fortune if the cousins succeed in breaking the will.

Doe Stirred Up Town.
A doe, lost in Willimantic, Conn., was chased by a dog into the Y. M. C. A. building. It broke the thick glass in the door and bounded into the vestibule, overturning furniture and scaring a visiting minister. It bounded upstairs and into the directors' room, from which it leaped through a window to the yard ten feet below. It then crossed the railroad tracks, and after swimming the Willimantic river, disappeared.

PARACHUTE LEAP RECORD BROKEN DROPT 3500 FEET

In Thirty-Five Seconds, Made at Selfridge Field Thursday by Private Boudreau.

Mt. Clemens, Mich., Jan. 8 (UP). — A world record parachute drop will be claimed for Private Stephen Boudreau of Selfridge Field, who leaped from a speeding airplane here yesterday and hurtled 3,500 feet in 35 seconds before pulling the rip cord which opened the parachute, approximately one thousand feet from the ground. One second over a minute and one-half elapsed before Boudreau made a perfect landing. He reported no ill effects from his experience. The previous unofficial world record for a similar drop was 2,250 feet, made by Joseph Crane of Detroit in 1925.

Not So Loud in Color

Ever since it became the fashion to display the hosiery, much attention has been given to different styles of stockings. The mode changes and varies as it does in all the rest of the costume and the subject engages the talent of some of the most prominent designers and merchants. The exact shade to be worn, writes a Paris fashion correspondent in the New York Times, has been debated for the past two seasons, the point being that something must be matched—the gown, the shoes, or even the complexion. The pink-blond shades that were so much in evidence during the summer have worn their popularity threadbare, and while one still sees them about, worn usually by the flapper type, the better stockings intended for the high-class clientele are quiet in color, beige, gray, castor, gun-metal and other demure shades. The smartest among the silk stockings have slender openwork clocks. Some have embroidered clocks in the same or in a contrasting color. Echoes of the return to favor of black stockings have been heard all season; in Paris they have actually arrived. Many women consider it more chic to wear black stockings with a black frock and shoes; when wearing light stockings they have shoes to match; black shoes they use with morning dress only, or else for country wear. The prettiest stockings shown among the modes for the early autumn are of sheer silk with a lace insertion covering the entire instep. The insertion is of chantilly in graceful floral patterns; in some styles it reaches almost to the knee. The all-black stocking is a favorite, but there are some charming examples in black silk, very sheer, with white point duchesse set in from the slipper toe to the garter on the roll-down stocking. Unusual and very handsome stockings of black are beaded with jet, steel or crystal; others are embroidered with a single motif in bright colors; but the very latest extravaganzas is the gossamer weight chiffon stocking on which are designed flowers, butterflies, birds or whatever appeals most to the taste of the wearer.

Sports Clothes Display Delightful Simplicity

No longer are country and sports clothes regarded simply as garments of general utilitarian purposes. In their present guise they have lost none of the former practical qualities, but have added a chic and distinction little dreamed of a decade ago when a rough tweed skirt and a clumsy sweater was the customary attire for sports.

Sweaters and tweed skirts have by no means disappeared from fashion's horizon, but sweaters are of gossamer weight and lovely soft colorings, tweeds show interesting new weaves and subtle indefinite patterns, and together they achieve an appearance that leaves nothing to be desired in the way of smartness.

Among the new modes for autumn, sports clothes are given a most conspicuous position and are marked by a delightful simplicity of line that is admirably in accord with the elusive tones of the soft woollens used in their development.

One of the most successful models is a straight frock of beige wool plaided in a deeper shade of brown. With this is worn a graceful cape lined with brown kasha in a very light weight, and a small hat of velours in a matching shade of brown.

A costume of this type is an excellent selection for immediate wear, and it will also serve as an appropriate and suitable costume through the early weeks of autumn.

GOVERNOR ASKED FOR INFORMATION

UNIVERSITY INQUIRY SHROUDED IN MYSTERY

Undergraduates Declare Unfavorable Publicity Given Recently of Charges of Liquor Violation Is Wholly Incorrect—and An Unfair Impression Has Been Given the Public Regarding the Moral Tone of the University—Boosting Ones Reputation at the Expense of a University Is Anything but Commendable.

A touch of melodrama was injected into the investigation of reported communistic beliefs of certain members of Ohio State university's faculty.

The "props" included a hurrying taxicab containing a special messenger delivering the "papers," a thick screen of mystery around the latest development and the qualified refusal of everyone concerned, who knew about the new angle, to talk for publication.

Investigation by the university trustees, asked for by Governor A. V. Donahey, as a result of the Dabney Horton arrest, is scheduled to be started next week on the campus.

Thursday's developments concerning a letter written three weeks ago by George W. Rightmire, acting president of the university, to the governor giving the views of the trustees on the entire situation.

The missive, according to information at the university was delivered to the executive offices by a special messenger, who hurried downtown in a taxicab.

J. A. Meckstroth, secretary to Governor Donahey, said the letter probably was among the executive papers on his desk. The governor is out of town. Meckstroth declared that he recalled there was a phrase in the letter which asked Donahey to define communism. Other than that, he said there was nothing startling in it.

Several trustees said they had seen the letter, but none had a copy of it. Most of them said that it was "courteous and polite," but they refused to quote from the contents.

Exactly what the letter said and meant constitutes the mystery.

University students took a hand in the issue by making public a resolution, adopted by Boost Ohio, an organization of representative men undergraduates, which deplored the publicity given to the institution by the projected investigation.

The students offered their services to Professor Rightmire in the investigation so that "simple justice may be done."

The Boost Ohio organization expressed the belief that any violation of the prohibition laws was the action of a relatively small minority of the student body. Most of the students, it was said, are "attending strictly to the business of getting an education."

State Senator James R. Hopley, of Bucyrus, author of the "red" resolution of the last legislative session, and to whom the governor referred the university trustees, said that it is unlikely that he will sponsor any attempt for further legislative inquiry when the assembly comes back next week for its one-day session.

Hopley said he was a "regular" Republican and would abide by the sentiment of the majority, which apparently is that no other business save that of financial relief will be considered.

The senator also said the present investigation should be carried to a finish by the governor. Hopley declared he knew nothing about the facts in the case.

A resolution adopted by the student organization says, in part:

"Whereas, much unfavorable publicity has been given recently to charges of widespread violation of the prohibition laws at fraternity social gatherings at the Ohio State university; and

"Whereas, The Boost Ohio committee, representing major undergraduate organization on the campus, from personal knowledge of the situation, is convinced that a wholly incorrect and unfair impression has been given to the public regarding the moral tone prevailing on the campus; now, therefore, be it

"Resolved, that the Boost Ohio committee express its firm belief that any violation of the prohibition laws is by a small minority, and that the actual proportion of lawlessness is much less relatively, than in any community of similar size in the state, and that such conditions are by no means as prevalent as many may have been led to believe."

OBJECTION TO THE HUSBAND RULING ROOST

St. Louis, Mo. (Jan. 7 (UP).—Mrs. Isabelle Delcarlo of Logan, Ohio, and Charles P. Bevan, Columbus, Ohio, are being held by police here today at the request of the former's mother.

They were arrested as they called at a telephone office for a money order which was to have been sent by Mrs. Delcarlo's mother.

Mrs. Delcarlo said she left home eight weeks ago because her husband wanted to "rule the roost." In Columbus she said she met Bevan, whose wife is suing for a divorce and that the two came on to St. Louis.

A piece of the boiler penetrated Tip's skull. The boiler was used to generate steam for the operation of a buzzsaw.

Gallipolis — A crushing ice jam in the Ohio river Thursday was threatening the Baltimore & Ohio railroad bridge and a half million dollar's worth of barges, houseboats and other shipping in the mouth of the Great Kanawha river near here.

The gorge extended from Henderson to Lock No. 9, and rivermen feared the jam would give way momentarily.

Columbus — Money, available in abundant quantities will stimulate residential building thruout the state this year, Charles G. King, Massillon president of the Ohio Building Association league, told a meeting of building and loan officials today.

King based his statement, he said, on reports received from almost every section of the state, declaring money was being poured into residential building and that sums for this purpose were readily available.

Columbus — Drastic revision in the regulations covering manufacture of cereal beverages, recently announced at Washington, were explained to Ohio cereal beverage manufacturers by Federal Prohibition Administrator Porterfield today.

Fifty manufacturers, representing all sections of the state, attended a conference which was called by Porterfield to obviate the necessity of issuing individual instructions.

ANNUAL SALE OF GASOLINE TO DECEMBER 31

Was 408,748,104 Gallons— Total Tax Certified Was $8,174,962.08.

Columbus, O., Jan. 8 (UP).—The highest monthly gasoline sales for 1925 were made in August when 61,727,190 gallons were certified for the collection of the two cent tax, making a tax of $1,234,543.80, the state tax commission announced today.

Since April 21, when the law became effective, the total number of gallons of gasoline certified for tax collection was 408,748,104 to December 31.

The total tax certified for that period was $8,174,962.08. Rerunds made on gasoline sold for other than motor vehicles totaled $21,146.75, leaving a net amount of $8,053,815.33 for collection.

FARMS IN OHIO UNDERGOING BIG CHANGES

Some Sections are Increasing Their Acreage While Others are Growing Smaller.

Western Ohio farms are adding to their acreage while eastern Ohio farms are decreasing in size, judging by the 1925 farms census figures for Ohio made public by the federal department of commerce.

The number of farms in Ohio decreased from 256,695 in 1920 to 244,703 in 1925 and the total farm area decreased from 23,515,888 to 22,222,475 acres.

Fourteen counties in the state, contrary to the typical tendency, reported an increase in the number of farms. Thirteen of those fourteen counties are in the eastern half of the state.

"The figures indicate," says Dr. J. I. Falconer, head of the rural economics department at the Ohio State university, "that western Ohio farmers reduced the number of farms but increased the size of the average farm in order to establish a unit more capable of production the chief corn belt products economically."

"In eastern Ohio the counties reporting an increase in the number of farms reduced the size of the average farm presumably to answer the increased demand for special crops, like truck crops, fruits, poultry and dairy products, all of which can be produced economically on comparatively small units."

Tendency seems to be on the decrease in Ohio, Dr. Falconer points out, if the 1925 farm census figures are accurate. In 1920, 29.5 per cent were operated by tenants.

BROTHERHOOD OF LUTHERAN CHURCH MET

Officers for Coming Year Elected and a Splendid Program Was Rendered.

The opening of the New Year in Trinity Evangelical Lutheran Brotherhood was attended by much success as was indicated by the enthusiastic meeting of Thursday evening.

The attendance was excellent and in keeping with the attendance record of the old year.

The usual business procedure was gone thru with before the election of officers for the ensuing year.

The election resulted as follows: President, E. E. Wolf; vice president, E. C. Ebert; treasurer, Clarence Ater recording secretary, H. H. Groce; reporting secretary, C. M. Titus.

After the election, the outgoing officers served chili-con-carne, wafers, dill pickles and coffee.

As has been the custom for many years the retiring officers also furnished the after dinner program.

President Brehmer gave a most interesting talk on "Henry Ford, The Man and His Work."

Vice President J. R. Noecker, who is always ready to respond, was not able to attend the meeting because of illness in the family. Secretary C. C. Schwarz highly entertained by singing the last popular song hit, "I Want My Rib."

Treasurer John Hulse, talked very interestingly on "Some Strange Customs in France as Seen Thru the Eyes of an American."

Reporting Secretary J. D. Hummel talked on "The Brotherhood of a Half Decade Ago."

The program was rounded out by Rev. G. J. Troutman, the ex-officio member of the executive committee, talking at length on "Some Members That We Do Not Want in Our Brotherhood," first introducing Mr. Grouch, Mr. Doolittle, Mr. Faultfinder, Mr. Dirty and Mr. Knocker, and after commenting on each and of the undesirability of these individuals, he then introduced some characters whose membership should be earnestly solicited during this year, among them being Mr. Cheerful, Mr. Perseverance, Mr. Willing and Mr. Booster. His talk was replete with good advice for the whole membership.

All in all the meeting was a fitting opening for another successful year in old Trinity.

MACK PARRETT

Is Uncle Sam's Annual Bill In Jazz Orgy.

A startling estimate of the United States' jazz bill is given in an article by Paul Kinkead in this week's Liberty.

"America, England, Germany, Japan; the whole world, is Jazz Mad," Kinkead writes. "The United States is paying at least $100,000,000 a year for seductive syncopation, to the musicians alone. In New York City approximately 25,000 men and a couple of thousand women are wailing through saxophones or playing musical instruments, in more than 3,000 orchestras, most of them specializing in Jazz.

"The estimates of experts range from $25,000,000 a year to $100,000,000 a year for the New York district, and they estimate that New York spends one-fourth of the American jazz budget. On that basis, the total is $400,000,000 a year for jazz music. Since music itself is a minor part of the expense of the average entertainment, one may figure for himself what America is spending in connection with jazz."

The GOLDEN RULE in PRACTICE

A series of articles by prominent leaders on the Golden Rule as a guide in International Relations.

A PUZZLE FOR HISTORIANS

By HENRY MORGENTHAU

As I write these lines, I am again on my way to the Near East. My trip has a serious purpose, for besides wishing to see the present conditions in the Near East and to observe the progress made in caring for the refugees, I plan again to visit those splendid orphan schools that are being maintained by the Near East Relief, and have the opportunity once more to sit down with those thousands of children, renewing the joy I have always felt among them.

One must really come face to face with those children, hear them sing their songs, see them practice their daily vocations, listen to their merry though sometimes pathetic voices, and realize their admiration for their American big brothers, to know what this great work actually means.

The philanthropic activities of Americans overseas are one of the great exceptions to America's isolation. I have often thought how future historians who study the American people of this period will be puzzled as to what prompted our general selfishness and isolation. They will observe our unprecedented prosperity, our apparently inexhaustible natural resources, our great mass-production which has brought comfort within every one's reach, and our having been until quite recently the haven of the refugees of all countries.

But it will be inexplicable to those historians, that people so favored, so generously endowed, should turn a deaf ear to the pitiful appeals of others, should practically tell them to depend on themselves and us, the few remaining remnants of their strength to pull themselves out of the distress caused by the war. One of the few shafts of light that will be observed by these historians in this dark picture are the activities of the Near East Relief.

Golden Rule Sunday will be observed throughout the United States in December, on behalf of the Near East Relief. This series of articles, by prominent public men who are supporters and spokesmen for this great philanthropy, is designed to call public attention to the background and purpose of the work and its need for general support.

The GOLDEN RULE in PRACTICE

A series of articles by prominent leaders on the Golden Rule as a guide in International Relations.

DO AS YOU'D BE DONE BY

By JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, JR.

It is well worth while to set aside each year a Golden Rule Sunday, on which the people of all nations shall direct their thought to the power of love and its expression in brotherhood and service.

The late war sought to demonstrate that force is the greatest thing in the world, that it would right all wrongs, cure all ills, solve problems.

What has been the result? Does peace reign throughout the world? Does good will exist among men and nations? Is there happiness, contentment and prosperity?

On the contrary, there never was more bitterness, selfishness and suffering than today.

Who will not admit that force has failed, that it cannot solve life's problems, that it is not the greatest thing in the world?

What, then, shall take its place, bind up humanity's gaping wounds, insure a real and lasting peace and bring happiness into the world? The answer is, Love.

St. Paul says that love is the greatest thing in the world.

Love is a simple, homely quality. Anyone can practice it anywhere, any time.

It is as applicable in Africa as in America; on weekdays in the struggle of life as on the Sabbath day in the churches.

It is applicable in business, for only as business puts the rendering of service first and the making of profits second will it be most successful, and all of the elements of love are essential in service.

It is applicable in industry, where its absence explains the bitterness and antagonism which often prevail. I am convinced that love is the greatest thing in the world, the greatest power, the greatest influence.

Golden Rule Sunday will be observed throughout the United States in December, on behalf of the Near East Relief. This series of articles, by prominent supporters and spokesmen for this great philanthropy, is designed to call attention to the background and purpose of the work and its need for general support.

Norma Shearer, in What May Be Called a "Before and After" Pose

WOULD you believe that these photographs are of the same girl? Yes, girls, it's Norma Shearer, movie star, in what might be called a "before and after" beauty pose. At the left she is the unattractive plain stenographer in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "His Secretary," and at the right she is her own charming self.

"Any ordinarily plain woman, not marred of course by too prominent a feature, who studies her own face and figure, can become reasonably attractive," asserts Miss Shearer.

"In the way she dresses, combs her hair, applies make-up, and even to her shoes, she can accent her good points and almost eliminate the things that deter her beauty."

"I was startled by the change that clothes that did not suit my personality, made. Wearing a stiff, tailored grey suit, a panne velvet sailor, and unbecoming glasses, I hardly knew myself when I looked into the mirror. Studying any woman on the street, it is easy to note what a very few changes would improve her appearance. I improved per cent."

BELLING BEE HELD LAST NIGHT

Tuesday Mrs. Edward Schlegler, who resides in Fairview and Mr. Oscar Dennis, also of this city, eloped to Greenup, Kentucky, and were made man and wife. Mr. and Mrs. Dennis arrived home Wednesday and last night their friends gave them an old-fashioned belling-bee at the home of the bride in Fairview. The groom is a widower and has passed his sixtieth milestone, the bride is over 30 years of age. Their many friends will wish them much happiness but are wondering why they eloped across the Ohio river, when they could have saved considerable expense by having the nuptial knot tied in Ohio, as both were over legal age.

Stewed Geese.

A flock of geese on a farmhouse near Vevey recently drank copiously of some cordial. They immediately started a riot. The farmer fearing they were poisoned, plucked their feathers, which he hoped to sell, and then threw the fowl in a barnhouse. The next morning he was surprised to see the geese come sheepishly out of the barn, still a bit wabbling, but otherwise no different from a human being on the morning after.

WID

Tells the Whys and the Wherefores Of the Movies.

Hollywood, Jan. 6.—Out in the Middle West the other day a movie theater owner put in front of his theater a warning. He announced that in his opinion the movie being shown that night wasn't so good. This was such an unusual act that when someone sent word of it to the movie trade press in New York quite an uproar developed. Yet I know a theater man in Hamilton, Ohio, who has been doing practically the same thing for a long time and has succeeded. In my opinion his success is due to the fact that he has won and kept the confidence of his patrons.

The movies have suffered plenty from having "too many critics" but it has suffered much more from not having enough honesty in the advertising used. Good merchants and good advertising men know that you must win and keep the confidence of the public, but the movie folks haven't as a class, learned that lesson yet. Instead of concentrating upon attracting the particular folks who would possibly enjoy the particular type of entertainment offered by a certain movie, the trend has all been to a Barnum-like use of meaningless superlatives which long ago lost all value in the movie world.

Clever theater managers throughout this country could do themselves a great favor if they would concentrate some serious thought on winning the confidence of the clientele they depend upon. If the movie is not so good, it is sure to have some element that will appeal to a certain class and a plain statement of fact, together with the calling of special attention to other features of the show is sure to win friends.

Of course most theater men don't like to pose as "critics." They hate "critics" on general principles. I guess I'm about the only "critic" the theater men ever loved, and that was because I for many years wrote technical criticisms for trade circulation only and pointed out things that were wrong with movies which made it possible for the theater men to use my arguments in buying the criticized movies cheaper.

Importance of Keeping Winter Wheat Crop Pure

The importance of keeping winter wheat pure is emphasized by farm crops men of the Minnesota university. Since mixtures of rye reduce the market value of winter wheat by lowering grades, the planting of wheat on fields that have not produced winter rye for several seasons is the best way to avoid this difficulty.

The university men do not recommend winter wheat as a regular crop in the Red river valley. In the north central part it may be grown successfully if Minturki or some variety equally hardy is planted early in September. Minturki was also proved satisfactory in central and southern sections.

Winter rye is a successful crop in northern Minnesota when a hardy variety is sown the first part of September. Swedish rye, Minnesota No. 2, is recommended for northern and central portions of the state. In the southern part Rosen rye may be grown successfully except on high exposed fields where the snow is likely to be blown off during the winter.

DUPLICATION OF NUMEROUS CITY NAMES

Six Circlevilles, But Only One Coshocton, Gallipolis and Ashtabula.

Most Ohio city names have counterparts in other states. This statement comes in response to alleged arguments put forth by some user of the mails that the state designation should be dropped after names of cities of outstanding importance as superfluous.

Most letters addressed to Cleveland are no doubt intended for the Ohio metropolis, the fifth city in the United States but there are altogether just 23 Cleveland in the United States to which the mail might be sent were not the name Ohio appended.

The world over, Cincinnati is thought of as being located exclusively in Ohio, but there are villages of the same name in Indiana and Iowa and there is a Cincinnati in New York.

As peculiar a name as Toledo is found in nine states and 19 cities or villages in the United States are called Columbus. Twenty-two states have Dayton and there is one Daytona. Champion of all names found in the directory of Ohio villages and cities is Franklin with 30 counterparts in the Union, besides 11 combinations of the name, five Franklins, three Franklinton and one Franklinton.

Other Ohio cities and villages whose counterparts in names are sprinkled from coast to coast are as follows:
Hamilton, 26 besides three combinations of the name with beach, city and square; Troy, 27, besides combinations with center, grove and mills; Greenville, 23 besides one Greenville and two combinations, Ashland 25; Canton 22; Hillsboro 24; Springfield 25; Oxford, 23 with combinations with depot, junction and Valley; Marion and two Marionvilles; Warren, 23 with six combinations.

Logan, 16; Fremont 13, Sidney 14; besides two Sydneys; Marietta 12; Athens 15; Cambridge 14; Mansfield 13; Newark 14; Lancaster 18; Mt. Vernon, 16; Marysville 11 besides three Maryvilles; Bellevue 12; Wilmington 10; Middletown 15 besides eight Middletons and a Middletown Springs; Lebanon, 20 and three combinations.

Even the names like Piqua, Bucyrus, Ottawa, Chillicothe Sandusky, Akron, Zanesville and Xenia are not peculiar to Ohio alone.

There are Xenias in Illinois and Kansas besides the one in Ohio, and there is a Xenia in Kentucky. There are eight Akrons, Indiana has a Zanesville and there is a Sandusky in Michigan, New York and Wisconsin as well as in Ohio, Kansas, Missouri and North Dakota all number a Bucyrus among their postoffices. Mail addressed to Piqua might be thrown off the train in Kansas or Kentucky as well as in Ohio for there are Piquas in both these states. Seven states have Ottawas, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri and Texas can match Ohio's Chillicothe in name.

The following Ohio villages and cities have unique names in the U. S. postal guide in that no other states have postoffices of similar names:

Wapakoneta, Coshocton, New Comerstown, Gallipolis, Galion (altho there are two Gallions), Ashtabula, Upper Sandusky and East Liverpool. Ohio has the only Lorain, but there are five Loraines, three Loranés and three Lorraines.

Mail addressed to Elyria might go to Kansas or Nebraska, as well as Ohio, while Findlay, Illinois might receive mail intended for the Ohio city. There is a New Philadelphia in Illinois and one in Indiana as well as in Ohio. There are Masillons in Alabama and Iowa in addition to the Ohio city of that name. Steubenville may be found in Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky. Pomeroy mail could go to Ohio, Iowa, Pennsylvania or Washington. Mississippi matches Ohio's Bellefontaine.

Some duplications are; Celina 5, Alliance 8, Defiance 5, Eaton 6, Kenton 8, Youngstown 6, Delaware 7, Urbana 9, Fostoria 6, Niles 6, Nile, 2, Bowling Green 7, Lima 8, Portsmouth 7, and Ironton 8.

There is only one Washington C. H., but there are 28 Washingtons and numerous combinations of the name.

Circleville may be found in Ohio, Kansas, New York, Texas, Utah and West Virginia, while Scircleville can be found only in Indiana.

Alcohol From Dough

Fermenting bread dough can be made to yield 7 per cent alcohol, it is claimed through application of a process discovered by an Italian engineer.

FARM NOTES

Soy beans are a satisfactory protein supplement to corn or other grains.

Nature's tonic for growing pigs is pasture and the exercise, sunshine and clean surroundings it affords.

Winter quarters for the breeding flock need not be elaborate unless the lambs are to be dropped early.

Probably no other piece of farm equipment has more fully demonstrated its value than has the silo.

More honey bees are needed in many apple orchards to adequately insure cross-pollination, entomologists have proved.

Wood Used for Type

Hard maple is used to a far greater extent than any other species for wood type. Maple is very hard and dense, and stands up well under severe treatment. It also "stays put" after being cut to final form. For electrotypesetting and wood engraving cherry has in the past been very largely used, but due to the scarcity of this wood others are being substituted.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. FARMERS BUY
FERTILIZERS

Increase Total Tonnage, But
Concentrate on Analyses
Listed by Colleges.

Ohio farmers are taking to high-grade commercial fertilizers better than ever before, figures compiled by the soils department at the Ohio State university show.

Back in 1922 Ohio farmers bought 122,414 tons of commercial mixed fertilizer, 16 per cent of which represented the fertilizers listed in the Ohio Standard Dozen Fertilizers suggested by the State university specialists as best for Ohio farms.

This past year Ohio farmers bought 164,545 tons of commercial mixed fertilizer. Of this total, 47 per cent represented the Ohio Standard Dozen.

In suggesting a dozen analyses of commercial fertilizer for Ohio, the university soils men aimed to devise a dozen that would meet the needs of virtually every Ohio farm. If fertilizer companies could confine themselves to no more than a dozen analyses, the soils specialists pointed out, it would be possible to reduce the cost of fertilizers appreciably.

There are still more than 100 different analyses on the market, according to Professor Firman E. Bear, head of the soils department at the university, 64 of which last year had a total tonnage of less than 12,000. The mixed fertilizers in the Ohio Standard Dozen this past year included nearly half of all the mixed fertilizers sold in Ohio.

"Analyses not in the Ohio Standard Dozen," says Professor Bear, "were eliminated for one of three reasons; either they were too dilute to be economical to the farmer; they were not feasible from the factory point of view; or there was little or no justifiable demand for them."

ADVENTURES

BY BETTY BROWNE

(Copyright.)

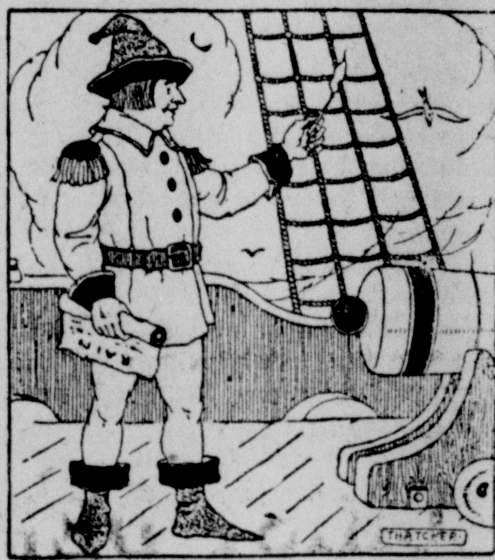

Ruth Meets the Thunderjoy

RUTH'S baby brother was asleep in his crib. Ruth had been left to take care of him while her mother went on an errand. He lay as still and quiet as the toy dog which he had taken to bed with him.

"He does not need watching," thought Ruth. Then her mind wandered. She found herself looking at a splash of sunshine which flooded through the window. In the sunshine tiny bits of dust were dancing.

"I wonder what becomes of all those dust specks," whispered Ruth to herself. At least she thought that she was whispering to herself until from right beside her came an answer.

"I'll show you," said the kindly old Crockejoy's voice. For it was he who had heard her. This time the Crockejoy carried two immense balls of cord which were wrapped on big reels like Ruth had seen the boys use when they flew kites. On the ends of his cord were two anchors. Before Ruth could even ask the Crockejoy how this cord was to be used, she and the Crockejoy had shrunk so small that they were no bigger than the dust atoms which she had seen floating in the sunshine. The Crockejoy had just finished hooking the anchors in an opening between two floor boards when a slight breeze came rustling through the window. Away they flew like kites on a windy day, only instead of having some one on the ground letting out the cord to them, they unreeled it themselves.

Up and up they went. Higher than the house-tops; higher than the church steeple; as high as the clouds themselves they soared.

"It's about to rain," said the Crockejoy, "and I want you to watch carefully and see just how the rain is made."

Ruth was very much surprised a moment later when she saw that the clouds were not solid, as she had always imagined. Instead, they were made up of tiny dust pieces like those she had seen floating in the sunlight. Clinging to these dust pieces were shiny globules of water. Right now the cloud she was looking at was soaking wet.

"Look, now! Look—quick!" cried the Crockejoy. "There, right in front of you, sails the storm boat with Captain Thunderjoy in command."

"Boom!" went the thunder gun. The storm broke. The lightning flashed. Water streamed from the cloud as though it were a great saturated sponge which some giant hand was squeezing.

Ruth knew she must hurry home or she would get soaking wet, so she reeled in the kite cord as fast as she could. In a few seconds she was back in her home, sitting right where she had been when the Crockejoy came to see her.

Raindrops were splashing on her face and her middie blouse was damp. She jumped up and closed the window and, as she did, the screen door slammed and she heard mother coming up the stairs.

"I'm glad I can tell mother about the window being open and rain dashing in. Instead of about my trip to cloudland and getting wet that way," thought Ruth as she ran her fingers through her bobbed hair and brushed several moist ringlets back from her forehead.

Noah Webster Ranks
Among "Best Sellers"

Just three weeks before Daniel Webster delivered his Bunker Hill address another Webster died whose name was as less a household word among his countrymen. No other American of the time had written upon so great a variety of subjects. Two books of widest national fame were his. Each had played an important part in the nation's social history.

One of the volumes was small enough to be slipped handily into a coat pocket. It had gone through one edition after another, until its binding of blue boards was as familiar to Americans as the cover of the household almanac or the lid of the family Bible. This was Noah Webster's "Speech." He published it when he was twenty-five styling it "Part I" of "A Grammatical Institute of the English Language." At its author's death, in 1843, not far from 20,000,000 copies had been circulated. This, be it remembered, was in a country of which the population was 17,000,000. Annual sales of the spelling book rose to near the million mark shortly after the beginning of the present century total distribution was estimated at some 75,000,000 copies. This establishes a record for "best seller" among American authors—Mentor Magazine.

AMUSEMENTS

Produced on an elaborate scale with a cast of recognized stars, the Allan Dwan-Paramount production, "Night Life of New York," which opened at the Met theater yesterday is just about the most colorful and entertaining metropolitan story that has yet reached the screen.

Featured in the leading roles of the production, which was adapted by Paul Schofield from an original story by Edgar Selwyn are Red La Rocque, Dorothy Gish, Ernest Torrence and George Hackathorne.

The picture brings Torrence to the screen in the role of an unusually successful westerner who is dead set against New York City because of a series of set-backs he suffered there in affairs of both business and the heart. Rod La Rocque, playing his son Ronald Bentley, just because he has been forbidden ever to go there, is crazy to hit the "big town." He's absolutely useless in business, and after an affair with an actress in town the father begins to think that it might be a good idea after all to let him have a taste of the white lights district and make him so sick of the place that he'll never want to go there again.

So it is that we next find Ronald more or less firmly established in one of Gotham's leading hotels. His first adventure is a flirtation with the pretty telephone operator in his hotel. He takes to her immediately because of the way she sasses him back when he gets fresh over the phone.

But Bentley Sr., had foreseen all possibilities of his son's falling for some chorus girl and has it all fixed with Carrie Feed, the actress Ronald had met back home, to "frame" the boy. There's a nice little check in it for her.

Subsequent events bring it about that young Bentley is involved in a jewel theft. The father thinks it's all part of his little plot against the boy but hot-foots it to town when he's informed differently. Meg (Dorothy Gish) the telephone operator, tells him the whole story after she has gotten a confession out of her younger brother. "He did it in order to get money enough to go west to recover his health," she says. The boy is promised clemency if he will hand over his jewels, but his accomplice comes in and, thinking the other man is trying to double-cross him, he kills him. Ronald is released and the thief arrested.

Young Bentley has had enough of New York and goes back to Clay City—Meg with him, while the father, who is now all taken up with Ronald's actress-friend, Carrie, remains behind to "do the town." As he says himself, "For thirty years I've done New York an injustice. Now I'm going to make up for it."

George Hackathorne has the role of Meg's brother. Arthur Housman is the other crook and Helen Lee Worthington plays Carrie. Riley Hatch also has a prominent role in the supporting cast.

"Night Life of New York" is a story of New York taken entirely "on the spot" and includes actual scenes at the famous El Fey club, the Hotel Commodore, etc.

DORMITORIES DEMONSTRATED AS PRACTICAL

Take Place of Expensive Cell Construction, High Walls are Not Needed.

Columbus, Jan. 7.—The Ohio Institute, "a private body with a public purpose," has taken a hand in the Prison problem of the State in the following manifesto:

Ohio has had about 500 prisoners at the London Farm for more than a year. This experience has demonstrated, that: A considerable portion of prisoners can be handled on the honor system. Expensive cell block construction and high concrete walls are not needed to safely confine a large percentage of prisoners.

Other states faced with the high cost of cell construction and with the evils of having to place two or more men in a cell have been using dormitories, housing from 50 to 100 men, and find the results satisfactory. Cells may cost from $4,000 to $5,000 per inmate. Dormitories have been built that cost from $600 to $1,000 per inmate. Experience in other states indicates that up to seventy-five per cent of a prison population can be safely housed in dormitories.

The overcrowded conditions at all of Ohio's penal institutions require the early expansion of the London Prison Farm. This expansion will involve:

Housing that is safe and economical.

Development of a variety of industries that will provide adequate employment for all prisoners and of such kinds that the training will be of value after release.

The establishment of a classification system so as to use the various penal institutions to the best advantage and provide the kind of treatment needed by the prisoners.

Recently the Ohio Board of Control authorized the Department of Public Welfare to construct two new buildings at the London Prison Farm, to provide housing on the dormitory plan for 600 additional prisoners and space for industries that will furnish employment for such men as are not used on the farm.

An intelligent public opinion can greatly assist public officials responsible for the confinement and treatment of prisoners so that the public may be safeguarded and prisoners who show some real desire to go straight may be trained for usefulness.

The Limit.

A school-teacher in a nearby city had a pupil who had a habit of chewing his lead pencil and piling the pulp on his desk. The teacher, seeing him do it, one day said:

"Joe, that's the limit."

When the superintendent visited the school he saw the pile of chewed pulp on Joe's desk and said to him: "What is that?"

"That's the limit," said the boy.

Has Memorized the Bible.

When his eyes began to fail, Rev. W. B. Hogg, the pastor of a western Methodist Episcopal church, started to cultivate his memory by committing to memory the various parts of the Bible, and he has already the New Testament and a large part of the Old. He has submitted to many tests, but he has never failed to demonstrate his perfect familiarity with the New Testament.

In spite of the haphazard management they receive, farm woodlands of the United States produced $394,321,823 worth of forest products in 1919.

Saving sometimes means losing; eggs held only a few days develop watery whites on the way to market, and thereby bring a lower price.

The common brown rat breeds six to ten times a year and produces an average of ten young. The feed rats consume on many farm would more than pay taxes. Ask your county agent about barium carbonate poison. It's inexpensive and effective.

Olive Oil Saves Pain

Olive oil is good for burns and scalds if applied immediately. It should be covered with the white of a raw egg to exclude the air.

LIABILITY INSURANCE

What It Is and the Benefits That Accrue to the Policy Holders.

I wonder if you realize that every car owner is responsible to the public for the operation of his car, whether he drives it himself or allows others to drive it.

PUBLIC LIABILITY is an insurance term indicating the responsibility the car owner is under for injuries or death inflicted on persons thru the operation of his car.

It is most important of all automobile insurance features, owing to the unknown possibilities of the claims.

Some of the factors making accidents and consequent liability claims daily more numerous, and the owner's risk in operating a car an ever increasing one, are:

CONGESTION OF TRAFFIC. Roads are about the same width as formerly, yet traffic thereon has greatly increased. Between fifteen and twenty million motor vehicles are registered in the United States today. This vast number is being increased daily.

LOW PRICES OF SECOND-HAND CARS have added greatly to the number of irresponsible drivers, who menace all other users of the roads. The careful, sane driver is often the sufferer from the faults of others. IMPROVED HIGHWAYS are a constant temptation to speedsters and encourage less careful attention on the part of all drivers.

THE CHILDREN MUST PLAY, and there being very little yard space around the average city home, the playing is done in the path of the motorists. The heavy tolls of 1924 in life, injuries and property losses have been given wide publicity in the press of the country.

AMBULANCE-CHASING LAWYERS (and there is one or more in every city) make a business of creating cases against any car owner involved in an accident, whether or not it is serious, whether or not he is liable and particularly if he has property.

COURT CHARGES AND ATTORNEY'S FEES MUST BE PAID, and eventually, possibly a heavy judgment to be paid with interest and costs. The feelings, sympathies and judgments of juries are generally in favor of the injured and against the car owner. Verdicts for injuries or death run into thousands of dollars, and are larger than ever before. Even if you win, your expenses mount to a large figure.

An automobile liability guarantees the investigation of claims whether you are liable or not, adjusts, pays, fights your case if necessary, pays expenses, lawyer's fees and court costs, relieves you from responsibility and worry. It does all of this for the owner and for any one legally operating the car with the owner's permission.

If you are now carrying liability insurance, the above facts will serve to strengthen the conviction that led you to protect yourself.

This information, coupled with the fact that last year no fewer than twenty-eight states introduced bills for compulsory liability insurance, is conclusive evidence of the advisability of every car owner relieving himself of personal liability.

THE HOMESPUN SENATOR

Hail and hurray for the homespun senator who has arrived at Washington, the Honorable George H. Williams of Missouri! When he was sworn in as a senator of the United States recently he wore a new suit of American homespun cloth, a dark gray suit of which he was intensely proud. Forthwith and promptly he announced he was the homespun senator and hoped for a record in that line.

At various times in the past homespun has been brought to the fore by men in public life. As a rule the wearer of that garb seeks to use the product of his own state, but Senator Williams had to send to North Carolina for the material for his suit. If it had been obtainable in Missouri, as was possible in days that are gone, his homespun adornment would have had a different meaning. As it is, Missouri loses something in the picture. She may have the homespun senator but she did not cover him with her own homespun product. The material in his suit is but an article of commerce. It lacks much of the home flavor.

Indiana once elected a man governor partly because he won the favor of voters by insisting on wearing clothing made from real Indiana material, the original and durable blue jeans, material with which men covered themselves in early days in that state. And he became Blue Jeans Williams, most readers of newspapers of that day having lost the name given him by his parents.

But today, as in other days, the cut or quality of clothing does not make the man, insures nothing more, in most instances, than a bit of personal oddity. The modern homespun garment insures nothing more than certainty of good service from the material, one more personal preference in clothing for the senate, and that body has had a generous and noticeable collection for years.

One may ride into office at times on an oddity of apparel, but reputations are made by service to the country, careful understanding of conditions, clear appreciation of responsibilities, willingness to be of service in the interests of the nation. The mantle of a senator is not the raiment that shields him from sun and storm.—O. S. Journal.

Standards for Beans Have Been Issued

Will Tend to Encourage Better Market Preparation.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Tentative standards for beans have been issued by the United States Department of Agriculture following a series of public hearings in leading bean producing sections of the country. The standards include nineteen different classes of beans and are proposed for adoption and use by state and commercial agencies to demonstrate their practicability under commercial conditions before official standards are established.

The importance of standards for this commodity is emphasized by the department in a statement that the commercial dry edible bean crop of the United States returns to farmers over $50,000,000 a year. Beans are an important staple food, standards for which, the department says, would tend to encourage better farm preparation for market resulting in larger returns to growers, would reduce hazards incident to marketing, and would improve the quality of the finished product.

More than 1,600 samples of beans were analyzed by the department to determine the range and limits of various quality factors in making up the grades. The tentative standards are made up of seven sets of grades for as many classes or groups of classes, the specifications giving weight to local production and marketing problems, as well as to consumer requirements.

Copies of the report of the department's bean marketing investigations together with copies of the tentative standards may be obtained upon request to the bureau of agricultural economics, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington.

EXTRA GOOD SALE

The largest and best sale held in this vicinity for some time was that of Herbert Melvin near Fox, Jan. 5th. Many who were present report the attendance one of the largest they ever saw at a public sale.

The sale started at 11:15 o'clock and with lively bidding was over a little after 2. Property brought extra good prices, amounting to $4,339. W. O. Bumgarner was the auctioneer and Wayne Hoover clerk.

Grow Horse-Radish From Cuttings Set in Spring

Horse-radish requires a very deep, cool, rich soil and late season growth for the best results. It is propagated from cuttings of the small side roots. The cuttings are made from the roots when they are dressed for market in the fall and are stored in the cellar or in pits as other roots are during the winter. These cuttings may then be planted in early spring but since most of the growth is later in the season it is customary to hold them till later and plant with some other crop such as early cabbage or beets. When planted the top of the cuttings should be from three to five inches below the top of the soil. Horse-radish will grow until freezing weather when it should be plowed out, cuttings made for the following year and the desirable roots marketed.

SHORT STORIES OF THE BUCKEYE STATE

OLD WOODS INDUSTRIES

Three primitive industries of Ohio, which brought considerable profit to those engaged in them in the early days, must be by this time practically abandoned. One was the cutting of "hoop-poles." Few of the younger people in the state now know what a hoop-pole is. In the swampy counties of the northwest section of the state the marshy woods were covered with small undergrowth of trees whose trunks were so small that split into halves, each part made a good hoop for binding barrels. Making barrels was a big business in the vicinity and where this work was carried on there was always a good demand for hoop-poles. This gave the section the name of "The Hoop Pole District" which carries some derision. Now the drained lands on which these poles grew are the most productive farm lands in the state.

In the hilly southern part of the state the bark-cutters picked up considerable income by cutting away the bark of the Chestnut oak which they piled by the stream sides, to float down on rafts to the Ohio river towns for use in tanning. This is probably done still, but the "free range" for operation is no longer available. New processes of making leather also dispense in some measure with the use of tanbark.

The third is charcoal burning. Formerly it was believed that heat made by coal or even coke could not be safely used in working iron. At that time there was a steady demand for charcoal for such uses and in the southern and southeastern part of the state where considerable iron production from native ore was carried on, charcoal burning was no small industry. Coke now takes its place in iron-working where coal fires will not do, and very little Ohio wood is put to this use now. The writer remembers seeing charcoal wagons with their peculiar racks driven occasionally on the streets of Columbus not many years back.—J. H. Galbraith in Columbus Dispatch.

A half century since Circleville was a market for hoop-poles and tan bark as we had a tannery and several cooper shops.

FIGHTING FOR BIG STAKES

Chicago, Jan. 6.—(UP.)—William D. Shepherd's fight for possession of Billy McClintock's $1,000,000 estate, opened in circuit court today.

Marie Gartner and Eva Nelson, maids in the Shepherd home, testified that they witnessed the will which Billy signed and which Shepherd is now seeking to have accepted by the court. This will, which Shepherd admits drawing up, leaves all of the McClintock fortune to Mr. and Mrs. Shepherd, except for an annuity of $8,000 for Isabelle Pope—the girl Billy would have married had not death prevented the marriage.

Opposed to Shepherd in the will contest are eight of Billy's cousins who argue that Shepherd used "undue influence" in having Billy sign the will and that it is therefore invalid. They are supported in their contention by Miss Pope, who has been promised half of the fortune if the cousins succeed in breaking the will.

Doe Stirred Up Town.

A doe, lost in Willimantic, Conn., was chased by a dog into the Y. M. C. A. building. It broke the thick glass in the door and bounded into the vestibule, overturning furniture and scaring a visiting minister. It bounded upstairs and into the directors' room, from which it leaped through a window to the yard ten feet below. It then crossed the railroad tracks, and after swimming the Willimantic river, disappeared.

PARACHUTE LEAP RECORD BROKEN DROPT 3500 FEET

In Thirty-Five Seconds, Made at Selfridge Field Thursday by Private Boudreau.

Mt. Clemens, Mich., Jan. 8 (UP).—A world record parachute drop will be claimed for Private Stephen Boudreau of Selfridge Field, who leaped from a speeding airplane here yesterday and hurtled 3,500 feet in 35 seconds before pulling the rip cord which opened the parachute, approximately one thousand feet from the ground. One second over a minute and one-half elapsed before Boudreau made a perfect landing. He reported no ill effects from his experience. The previous unofficial world record for a similar drop was 2,250 feet, made by Joseph Crane of Detroit in 1925.

Gray Caracul Coat Has Popular Fox Trimming

Fur coats are as popular as ever. There are many kinds to select from—all kinds of furs and all kinds of trimmings. Here is shown a model that bids fair to win favor. It is gray caracul, with fox trimming, so much in the autumn-winter fashion picture.

Latest Paris Hosiery

Not So Loud in Color

Ever since it became the fashion to display the hosiery, much attention has been given to different styles of stockings. The mode changes and varies as it does in all the rest of the costume and the subject engages the talent of some of the most prominent designers and merchants. The exact shade to be worn, writes a Paris fashion correspondent in the New York Times, has been debated for the past two seasons, the point being that something must be matched—the gown, the shoes, or even the complexion. The pink-blond shades that were so much in evidence during the summer have worn their popularity threadbare, and while one still sees them about, worn usually by the flapper type, the better stockings intended for the high-class clientele are quiet in color, beige, gray, castor, gun-metal and other demure shades. The smartest among the silk stockings have slender openwork clocks. Some have embroidered clocks in the same or in a contrasting color. Echoes of the return to favor of black stockings have been heard all season; in Paris they have actually arrived. Many women consider it more chic to wear black stockings with a black frock and shoes; when wearing light stockings they have shoes to match; black shoes they use with morning dress only, or else for country wear. The prettiest stockings shown among the modes for the early autumn are of sheer silk with a lace insertion covering the entire instep. The insertion is of chantilly in graceful floral patterns; in some styles it reaches almost to the knee. The all-black stocking is a favorite, but there are some charming examples in black silk, very sheer, with white point duchesse set in from the slipper toe to the garter on the roll-down stocking. Unusual and very handsome stockings of black are beaded with jet, steel or crystal; others are embroidered with a single motif in bright colors; but the very latest extravaganzas is the gossamer weight chiffon stocking on which are designed flowers, butterflies, birds or whatever appeals most to the taste of the wearer.

Sports Clothes Display Delightful Simplicity

No longer are country and sports clothes regarded simply as garments of general utilitarian purposes. In their present guise they have lost none of the former practical qualities, but have added a chic and distinction little dreamed of a decade ago when a rough tweed skirt and a clumsy sweater was the customary attire for sports.

Sweaters and tweed skirts have by no means disappeared from fashion's horizon, but sweaters are of gossamer weight and lovely soft colorings, tweeds show interesting new weaves and subtle indefinite patterns, and together they achieve an appearance that leaves nothing to be desired in the way of smartness.

Among the new modes for autumn, sports clothes are given a most conspicuous position and are marked by a delightful simplicity of line that is admirably in accord with the elusive tones of the soft woollens used in their development.

One of the most successful models is a straight frock of beige wool plaided in a deeper shade of brown. With this is worn a graceful cape lined with brown kasha in a very light weight, and a small hat of velours in a matching shade of brown.

A costume of this type is an excellent selection for immediate wear, and it will also serve as an appropriate and suitable costume through the early weeks of autumn.
